

Description from Bulbapedia

Dragapult is a draconic Pokémon. Dragapult's appearance is reminiscent of both ancient lepospondyls such as Diplocaulus and modern stealth bombers. It has a triangular, wing-shaped head; a relatively short body; and a long, laterally flattened tail similar to a newt's. The dorsal side of Dragapult's flattened head and the anterior half of its body are a dark navy color, which fades to a teal on its posterior end and tail. The lateral, wing-like crests of its head are pink. The ventral portion of its head and body are a light yellow-tan color, and its belly is marked with three pink chevrons angled toward its head. It has four hollow, triangular horns and narrow yellow eyes with pink eyelids. Its limbs are relatively short and thin, and are clawed. The claws on its forelimbs are pink. Dragapult's tail becomes transparent and ethereal toward its tip. Dragapult and its evolutionary line are the ghosts of prehistoric aquatic Pokémon. Dragapult carries a pair of Dreepy inside its horns, which it will fire at its opponents like supersonic missiles during battle. It's said that the Dreepy it carries greatly enjoy being sent flying toward opponents at immense speeds. This is evident by the fact that Dreepy always gather around the fastest Dragapult in their group. By focusing its mind, Dragapult can also turn itself, as well as the Dreepy inside its horns, invisible. Much of Dragapult's behavior beyond this, however, remains a mystery. Dragapult is the only known Pokémon capable of learning the move Dragon Darts. Dragapult evolves from Drakloak and is the final form of Dreepy.

Tournament deck and rank details – LimitlessTCG

Dragapult Dusknoir by Andrew Hedrick, Regional Vancouver, 1st
Dragapult by Aneil Saini, Regional Vancouver, 6th
Dragapult by Vinicius Fernandez, Regional Fortaleza, 1st
Dragapult Dusknoir by Francisco Osorio, Regional Fortaleza, 3rd
Dragapult by Gabriel F, EUIC 2025 London (SR), 1st